Insightful reviews

Kaye: Rabbit is mad for carrots, and he grows them in anticipation of the day when he will get to harvest his crop and make carrot soup. When the big day comes, all of his carrots are gone! He asks friend after friend, but all deny knowledge...but the mystery is revealed when his friends throw a surprise party for him featuring carrot soup as the main dish.

Ina: John Segal's text and wonderfully detailed illustrations work well to tell the story of a rabbit who's favorite food is carrot soup. The reader meets Mr. Rabbit while looking through seed catalogs, and there is a wonderful page of all sorts of carrots - very engaging to my story time audience. Mr. Rabbit plows, plants and waits for his carrots to be ready...but when harvest day arrives he finds that all the carrots have disappeared! As he tries to discover what happened, an alert reader can see the clues in the background, and figure out what happened to Mr. Rabbit's carrots...and predict what the outcome might be. Great read aloud with loads of opportunities to engage a story time audience and have them interact with the story. Also contains Mr. Rabbit's recipe for carrot soup - which looks good!

Lori Smith: This book is appropriate for grades K through 2. It supports the teaching of the life cycle of a plant (carrot) and what is needed in order for a plant (carrot) to grow.

Molly: Rabbit takes his carrot soup seriously! He begins within the spring by way of planting numerous carrots (I love this part, childrens may still examine that there are greater than simply 'plain' carrots out there- heavily test a few red dragons sometime!) through harvest time, however, the entire carrots have disappeared. Observant listeners could discover a few job out of rabbit's view and get a sneak height on the shock ending.

Whitney: Cassie enjoyed this book.

Emily: Very cute, easy tale a couple of rabbit who simply desires his carrot soup for dinner yet runs into a few hassle alongside the way. learn this one three times simply at the present time to LP!
