Description

Miranda Glivven, part of a family that has tended the Gwynnhead lighthouse for years, seeks her missing husband--who disappeared while working secretly for the government--with the help of a strange golden cat and a little magic.

Insightful reviews

Sharon Michael: A pleasant, well crafted and entertaining fantasy with well developed characters and a nice magical twist to the 'search for the missing' plot.

The main character is a sensible, middle aged woman with older children and a missing husband she finds it necessary to search for. A stray cat provides the touch of magic which carries the storyline along very nicely and provides additional interest.

Not a particularly original plot, but handled well, with interesting characters and smooth writing style.

Sharon: This was an enjoyable surprise and a very entertaining read. The story unfolded revealing little clues as we began to perhaps guess what may have caused Alexi's disappearance. Some red herrings and suspicious characters made this a satisfying mystery as well as a fantasy. I enjoyed the fact that Miranda's character as a normal middle aged woman trying to solve a very strange mystery was very believable. In general I found the book was unput-downable! I started reading last night and unfortunately for the huge pile of washing that needs folding... didn't put it down this morning until I had finished. Well worth the modest Kindle purchase price.

Kjirstin: Fun story! A wife goes off in search of her vanished husband, and on the way has amazing adventures. Truthfully, my favorite part of this book was the worldbuilding -- it was so fascinating to read how this world operated! An intriguing notion, overall, and I'm glad I read it.

Shinyfox: The characters have been stress-free and the plot used to be interesting. yet i used to be capable of decide upon a few extremely important and key plot twists earlier than it even got here with reference to revealing them. A adorable publication that was once enjoyable to whereas away the time and a e-book that used to be effortless to follow.

Dana: I bought this ebook unfastened to learn on my kindle. It was once strangely captivating. It held my curiosity good and that i learn all of it today. Miranda's husband of 18 years, Alexi, a lighthouse keeper, has been long gone for 4 months on a mystery venture for the governor. He has now not written to her in months. Finally, she leaves her teenage sons to guy the lighthouse and units off for town the place her husband's letters have been despatched from. An orange cat who has lately additional himself to her relatives comes with her. Perplexingly, she is accused of working towards magic as the cat has additional toes. The Prefect for her city arrives and bails her out and encourages her to proceed her look for her husband. a person is following her, the police are usually not cooperating and he or she needs to locate clues to his whereabouts on her own. regardless of rumors of magic, which she believes doesn't exist and is a number of nonsense, and mysteries and lies, she maintains her seek to discover her husband. this can be a nice booklet and that i rather loved it!

Peter M. Podesta: fascinating concept Didn't detect the plot totally till nearly 80% through. bet she did not like being a believer on the end. Fine.
