Description

"The approach I take with my writing is to have my work reflect real life, and yet be shaped into the best story possible. I feel that a powerful piece of fiction can often convey an emotional truth more compellingly than a strictly factual version."--Linda Crew

Linda Crew is a recipient of the IRA Children's Book Award and the Golden Kite Award, and her books have been named ALA Notables as well as ALA Best Books.

Linda Crew didn't always have to be a writer. In fact, while attending junior high school in the early sixties, this award-winning author wanted to be a folksinger. By high school, when it had become apparent to her that she really couldn't sing, she decided to become an actress. Then, at the University of Oregon, her theatrical ambitions evaporated. At her mother's suggestion, Crew switched her major to journalism--and loved it.

Crew's training was in journalism--interviewing, researching, and marketing--and she was encouraged to present the facts accurately and without fuss. But her assignments always ended up full of dialogue and she "had this compelling urge to make a story just a little better than the way it happened." Thus, her talent for writing fiction was born.

After college, Linda Crew married her husband Herb and settled on a farm in her home state of Oregon, where the couple still resides today with their three children. Crew leads a full, busy life and admits, "It's difficult sometimes to carve out the time for writing with so many other demands, but it's important for me to do some living. After all, what could a person possibly write about if she spent all day closeted in front of her computer?" Book List

Unfortunately, their love is forbidden and heavily frowned upon by the people of her culture, especially by her family. Linda Crew uses her American authenticity to write about the struggles a young American girl faces in her everyday life. The story line is original and enduring, never leaving you with a dull moment. Sundara's traditions and beliefs are authentic, but will she stick to them and respect her culture, or succumb to the American way. Esther Stella: the best books i have ever read. primarily it's a couple of lady who involves the United States from Cambodia along with her aunt's kinfolk to flee from the violence in her personal country. a very good Cambodian woman waits until eventually her family members arranges a wedding for her, however the major character, Sundara, falls in love with an American boy. This story made me cry. I bear in mind analyzing it whilst i used to be in center school. the yankee boy she falls in love with is in love along with her as well. he's intrigued together with her kingdom and wonders approximately his personal difficulties in addition to American difficulties in comparison to violence in different countries. the main shiny scene I be mindful used to be in the course of a visit to the dumpsters, Sundara reveals a damaged crippled doll and it haunts her as in the course of her journey to the US her aunt's child little one doesn't live to tell the tale the tough journey and he or she used to be compelled to throw her overboard. Sundara breaks down and cries in regards to the lose virtually as though she have been possessed. The scene used to be so haunting and so awesome it continues to be with me until now, nearly 5 years later. i haven't got the booklet anymore (I'm confident my mother threw out my books...) yet i will never forget it as the most effective books i have ever read. suggest and expense five out of five definitely.
