Description

Patricia Gaffney's sensational national bestseller, The Saving Graces, won the hearts of readers everywhere and propelled her into the first ranks of contemporary women writers. Now this gifted author illuminates the silken bonds of family through the interconnected lives of three generations of women in a small town in rural Virginia.

"Can grief last for a person's whole life?" That is the question Carrie struggles to answer after the sudden death of her husband. She also mourns the death of their love - an emotional erosion that began long before her husband's heart gave out.

Complicating matters is Carrie's mother, Dana, a snobbish yet sympathetic woman who tries to do what she thinks best. Dana, too, mourns a painful loss - the disintegration of her relationship with Carrie. "I'd give anything for the closeness we used to have, but she won't let me in."

At the end point of these two generations is Carrie's daughter Ruth, who silently copes with a double tragedy of her own, the loss of her father and the emotional abandonment of her mother. "She's still got me, but she's about half the mother I used to have."

Through their stories, Patricia Gaffney explores all women's relationships - the things that sometimes divide them, but ultimately bind them together. Wise, moving, and heartbreakingly real, Circle of Three creates the perplexing and invigorating magic that is life itself.

Insightful reviews

Cristel: This story reminded me of Hope Floats. The movie is actually even mentioned in the book. Still, I enjoyed it, and thought the characters' personalities and thoughts were explained very completely. I liked The Saving Graces a little better than Circle of Three, but both were a good way to spend a day on a lounge chair.

Sheila: "I loved this book. It brought a family together and explored the lives of 3 women. 3 totally different people but the same as they found out that they were alike as mother, mother, and daughter. It resembled so much like my family that I am keeping Circle of Three in my permanent collection."

Kondaveeti Donga: great book

Wendy: The Circle of 3 was once a grandmother, mom and daughter. the tale is of the angst among the moms and daughters. Interestingly, the grandmother used to be turning 70 and wasn't satisfied approximately it at all. As I flip 70 in a number of months, i have to say I disagree with her. for those who may perhaps see my stash of wool and fabrics, you'll be aware of that i've got sufficient to maintain me knitting and quilting for plenty of extra years to come. I loved the book.

Kitty Tomlinson: kin of ladies take care of relationships and every other. Dana is the matriarch, unhappily married to silent, George. Carrie, Dana's daughter is facing the hot loss of life of her husband, whereas attempting to support her daughter, Ruth take care of the lack of her father. Then Carrie's past love returns to town.

Jennifer White: tale approximately mom daughter relationships and husband and spouse dynamics interlaced with a backstory relating to Noah's arc.
