Insightful reviews

William: I was unfamiliar with Mr. Browning's talents, not being a regular subscriber to "The Guardian", and not having regular contact with witty Brits. I found this book quite delightful, a very good book to have around for those times when you have "a few minutes to read" or must read in a "distracted" environment (on a train/plane/bus or during an OWS protest). This is what Dave Berry might be like if only Dave had more wit and less words. Simple ideas like, "Flattery is vertical foreplay" sum up the kind of thoughtful humor this book is loaded with. And with each entry coming in at just under two pages, you are never more than 30 seconds (unless you silently mouth each word as you read) from the end of Browning's humorous stream of consciousness. You then will have time to glance about and move to a free place on the train, or shove the remains of your fast food lunch into the annoying maw of an unwashed protestor on Wall Street as they, "Hey! Hey! Ho! Ho!, Time for them to Go!"

My copy is already well dogeared and underscored. Highly recommended.

Rachael Pedersen:

I used to read this at work inbetween Window Cleaning jobs, each page or 2 is like a new topic so very easy to pick up and put down again.

It's so funny, I would be laughing loudly all the way to the next customer!

My Dad used to say 'Are you reading your giggle book again?'

It also makes for great bathroom/toilet reading. I used to keep a few funny books by the loo in my old flat, but found that visitors would often be gone for a long time, and then you would hear them giggling!

FreshGrads .Sg: They say laughter is the best medicine. This book is just that with its deadpan humour and the exact thoughts you were thinking every morning such as How to...wake up.

Guy Browning put together his collection from his Guardian columns to compile this excellent easy read of Never Hit a Jellyfish with a Spade.

The book is great for humour that relates to everyday life. You can see how much fun he is having in the writing by his fluency and intellect. He pokes fun at everything from the sports athlete, the extreme sports enthusiast, the teenagers of today, neighbours, love, marriage and most of all ourselves in our best and worst states. A little expert from How to...extreme sports.

" It's vital if you're going to do any kind of extreme sport to dress like you're a surf dude and to shout 'Whoaaaaa!!!' when you're doing it. Turning up in a comfortable tweed jacket and doing something extreme while whistling nonchalantly just makes everyone else feel as though they're wasting their time....

The big secret with extreme sports is that they're all rather easy. That's because all extreme sports are gravity assisted. No one classes ultra-marathon running or single-handed circumnavigation or Arctic crossing as extreme sports because they require monumental effort, discipline and strength. Besides which you'd freeze your nads off in surf gear and nobody would hear you going 'Whoaaaaa!!!' when you disappeared down a ninety-foot crevasse."

I'd recommend this book to anyone who can't keep still for more than 10 minutes in the same spot. I assure you, this book will. Each of his columns on the How tos... is about 2 pages long. You'll soon realise you're addicted to the book and can't put it down. If you think this is a self-help book for individuals, think again. It really isn't that, but more like a humourous outlook on life and its little challenges.
