The words stung John Hare's fainting spirit into life. He opened his eyes. The desert still stretched before him, the appalling thing that had overpowered him with its deceiving purple distance. Near by stood a sombre group of men. Leave him here, said one, addressing a gray-bearded giant. "He's the fellow sent into southern Utah to spy out the cattle thieves. He's all but dead. Dene's out-laws are after him. Don't cross Dene." The stately answer might have come from a Scottish Covenanter or a follower of Cromwell. Martin Cole, I will not go a hair's-breadth out of my way for Dene or any other man. You forget your religion. I see my duty to God.

Insightful reviews

Cathy: I am interested in the history of the Lee's Ferry and House Rock Valley areas of Arizona. I knew that Zane Grey had spent time there and that this story was loosely based on the people he knew there, primarily Jim Emet. So this was part of my enjoyment of the book, but I was surprised how much I liked reading this just for the story. For one thing, the romance is really sweet.

Jim Corson: Still a pretty good read after 60 years.

Tom: Kind of boring for a western.

Ron: learn my evaluate at my blog.

Mark W. Cole: finally the nice man shoots the undesirable man and will get the girl.

Claude Bealer: background of the DesertThis is one other one in every of Zane Grey's classics. I rather loved his description of a trip around the painted desert. He develops each one .main personality within the tale in a fashion that captures your complete awareness and makes it not easy for you place the e-book down. This publication is within the public domain. it's a nice read!!
